

Alexis Wichowski is a public servant, teacher, and writer. She serves as Deputy Chief Technology Officer for Innovation for the City of New York, Acting Director of Communications (2020-present), and served as Acting Deputy Chief Technology Officer for Broadband (2020-2021). She is an adjunct associate professor in Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs. She previously served New York City as an Associate Commissioner at the newly established Department of Veterans' Services and a Disaster Relief Field Responder before and during 9/11.

Other government work includes Program Officer for the US Department of State's Office of eDiplomacy, Diplomatic Innovation Division under then-Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, and Director of Media Analysis Strategy at the Permanent Mission of the United States to the United Nations. Awards include the Presidential Management Fellowship, two Meritorious Honor Awards, a Distinguished Dissertation Award, a student-nominated teaching award, and a Fulbright. Outside government, Wichowski has worked in media impact research, information architecture development, academic book indexing, web coding, theater production, foreign sitcoms, and pretzel vending.

Wichowski regularly conducts research and writes about the impact of media, technology and government, with publications in The Washington Post, WIRED, Foreign Affairs, The Atlantic, TechCrunch, GovExec, The Hill, and others. Wichowski's critically-acclaimed book, *The Information Trade: How Big Tech Conquers Countries, Challenges Our Rights, and Transforms Our World* (HarperCollins) was published in 2020.

Current courses include *Tech & Tactics for Innovative Policymaking* (winner of SIPA's "Top 5 Course Award," selected by students out of over 200 courses) and *Technology, National Security & The Citizen*. She's also served as faculty advisor for capstone courses studying technological authoritarianism in China for the US Congress and digital transformation for the government of Aruba.

Wichowski holds a PhD in Information Science from the University at Albany's College of Engineering and Applied Sciences and a BA in Chinese from Connecticut College, completed in three years cum laude. She lives in Brooklyn with her family and reads science fiction voraciously.